

A FIELD DISPATCH · REVGENIUS IRL

What actually works.

Four founders who each built a company on "AI will fix your pipeline" — and spent the night naming what didn't.

Clay · Attention · HubSpot · Spara

Overhyped → trusted.

OPERATOR

OVERHYPED

WHERE THE VALUE IS

Everett Berry

CLAY

Black-box "go make me money" agents

Agents inside a workflow a human built

Anis Bennaceur

ATTENTION

The last 10% skipped after Claude Code

Human SDRs that do things that don't scale

Ari Echt-Wilson

HUBSPOT

The tooling itself

Taste + timing – knowing what good looks like

David Walker

SPARA

Replace-the-rep autonomy

Trust – skin in the game to fix it

The human is the moat.

Berry

CLAY

Bennaceur

ATTENTION

Echt-Wilson

HUBSPOT

Walker

SPARA

THE ONE SCARCE INPUT

Judgment • taste • accountability
the move worth making

One motion, four bets.

Clay

THE WORKBENCH

Data

Enrichment

Orchestration

Attention

ACTS ON APPROVAL

Signal

Judgment / Approval

HubSpot

PROTECTS THE SEND

Send / Deliverability

Spara

MEETS THE HAND-RAISER

Signal

Inbound intake

Strip the logos: the signal-triggered, human-approved system is what shipped.

When an AI picks your stack.

BERRY'S DEMO AGENT WENT SHOPPING FOR ITS OWN TOOLS

The buyer is an AI. It assembles the stack.

KNOWN BRAND

Picked.

"I'd heard of it, so – great, that seems fine."
Checks the box.

UNKNOWN TOOL

Verified.

Gets the scrutiny – the human stops to look it up.

The next distribution war is being the brand an AI recommends before anyone checks its work.